

PICTURES OF A GONE CITY

TECH AND THE DARK SIDE OF PROSPERITY IN THE SAN FRANCISCO BAY AREA

A presentation and dialogue with author
Richard A. Walker

Richard A. Walker is professor emeritus of geography at the University of California, Berkeley and the director of the Living New Deal Project. His new book examines the growth of the Greater Silicon Valley and its impact on the urban scene, including the housing bubble and the newly exploded metropolis. Walker takes on the political questions raised by the environmental impact of the boom, the fantastical ideology of TechWorld and the tech-led transformation of the region.
